After hearing of the AOL lawsuit against Microsoft, I decided to send you a few comments. I have been on the internet for a few years now through AT&T World Net service. When I applied I was given a choice of browsers, either Netscape or Internet Explorer. At that time I chose Netscape. While surfing the Internet later I learned that I could also use Internet Explorer to connect through World Net. After using both browsers for an extended period of time, it became evident that the Internet Explorer browser by Microsoft was more dependable and seemed to be more flexible to use. I have been using it for the past two years. My point is that given open competition, Microsoft has proven to be the more superior browser, and I feel that AOL has filed a frivolous lawsuit.
